This element is located in the old channel harbour. this place is around 5 minutes walking from the town center. It has a strong history, since the Donau-Main channel was built. It's also possible to see the Hall of Liberation, the most representative building in Kelheim. Today there are no more boats. It's used almost by fishermen. The atmosphere is quite and lonely.

The shape of the floating bar reminds a boat but it's fixed, it cannot move. The space is divided in 3 areas: services, the inner room and a terrace, which provides views from the surroundings.

The roof is a singular element, which reminds a wave, water movement. This shape is also used in the bar, to create a dynamic space. The walls are built by wooden planks, like the traditional buildings.

This floating bar provides a place not just during the good weather, when more people are in the harbour. It also could be use in winter. The play of light and shadows makes this element attractive to spend time there.
